

Grand Aggregate Winner...

Rose Doucet is congratulated by Ed Vogel, who presented the Vogel's UFA plaque in recognition of her numerous winning entries in the 1989 Elk Point Agricultural Fair. Our apologies--the group picture of winners did not turn out.

Fair draws quality entries

The quantity of entries at Elk Point's 1989 Agricultural Fair may have been down slightly from previous years, but 'the quality was superb,' Fair Board Chairman Margaret Modin told a large crowd assembled for the announcement of aggregate and section winners Saturday evening in the exhibit-filled Elks Hall.

It may have been too hot to bake, too dry for crops of grain, hay, vegetables, fruit and flowers, and the community people too busy to work on crafts and hobbies, but those who did make the effort to compete made a very fine showing.

Aggregate winner of the Vogel's UFA plaque and $50 cash prize donated by Westminster Resources was Rose Doucet, who also won the Canning and House Plant sections. There were only 50 entries, by 17 individuals, in the Canning section this year, reported assistant convenor Norma Berg, who presented Mrs. Doucet with the section prize from Elk Point Co-op. The House Plant section had 42 entrants, according to convenor Gisele Pederson, who presented Mrs. Doucet's prize on behalf of Macleods.

First runner-up in the Grand Aggregate count was Jean Dacyk, who was presented with a cash prize from Pan Canadian Petroleum. Mrs. Dacyk braved the hot weather to prepare the numerous entries which won her the Baking section prize, presented by convenor Irene Lindquist on behalf of the Empress Restaurant, and also defied dry weather to produce the section winners in the Vegetable section, where Katharine Shymkiw presented her with the award from Phil's Hardware.

Second runner-up, Edith Mitchell, was recipient of a cash award from Golden Loaf Bakery. Flower section convenor Ivy Dunlap also presen-

Archaeological dig over for this year

A summer of digging, sifting and searching deep into the past for the artifacts of a long ago era has drawn to a close at Fort George, a clearing on the poplar clad hills above the North Saskatchewan River eleven miles southeast of Elk Point where almost 200 years ago this North West Company post shared its brief glory with the rival Hudson's Bay Company's Buckingham House as the hub of the fur trade in the Canadian west.

Five members of the Archaeological Survey of Alberta and six locally hired workers have spent the past three months painstakingly unearthing the remains of the fort: charred beams and floor boards, flint arrowheads, bones of butchered game animals, trade jewellery, a silver shoe buckle, a huge and rusty key, and no less than 18,921 trade beads.

Shovelful by careful shovelful, the soil covering the site of the main house was cleared away, down to the plastic sheets covering the excavations by the University of Alberta anthropology department in the 1970s. The plastic removed, archaeologist Mike Forsman and his team delved deeper, finding a second cellar, the location of a possible shed along the east side of the house, and fire-scarred floorboards running in several directions. One wheelbarrowful at a time, the soil was sifted to determine if any tiny artifacts--an earring, a bead, a fragment of pottery--were contained therein.

Some needed no sifting to be revealed. Last Monday, with only a few days of the summer's task remaining, a worker's probing shovel struck bone. Quickly kneeling, he dug with his hands into an opening below the blackened floorboards and pulled out part of the leg bone of a large animal. Further searching uncovered more bones--probably a garbage pit for food refuse left by a crew working at the site before the main house was built, some 196 years ago.

Forsman, Laboratory Supervisor Michele Belanger and their crew were hosted by the Elk Point Historical Society and the Fort George-Buckingham House Advisory Board at a windup supper Tuesday evening, and were invited by Historical Society President Frank Mayner to reminisce about their summer's work.

A large amount of artifacts, as well as information and data, will be going back to Edmonton with the archaeological crew, Forsman said, for cataloguing and documentation. He termed the summer 'quite a success,' with the main house excavation yielding considerable information. Numerous photographs were taken over the summer, and Forsman hopes to come back to Elk Point to show his slides some time during the winter. Some, taken from the higher altitude of a cherry picker basket, will hopefully be suitable for posters, he said.

Visitors from as far away as Mexico, France, and China viewed the diggings, and included the great grandson of one of the factors from Buckingham House, who had written home to tell of an invitation to tea at Fort George.

Ms Belanger reported a good response to the 'storefront lab' in Elk Point, which had over 200 visitors during the summer.

The eleven member archaeological team whose summer has been spent probing into the past of Fort George fur trading post was congratulated on a good summer's work by members of the Elk Point Historical Society and the Fort George-Buckingham House Advisory Committee at a year end windup barbecue.

Town looks ahead

With summer 1989 nearing an end, Elk Point Town Council looked ahead at plans for recreational and tourism related developments in future years.

With the bicentennial of the Fort George-Buckingham

House fur trading forts just over two years away in 1992, Council studied a recommendation from the Tourism Action Committee that planning for the event be initiated, and will send a letter to the Historical Society asking if they would be willing to spearhead the plans, with the Town's assistance.

The Tourism Action Committee also asked Council to investigate the possibilities of providing a serviced overnight campground facility in Elk Point. It was noted that while campsites are being developed at the recreation land, these are inconvenient for those attending functions such as weddings in town, and it would be prohibitively expensive to provide electrical and water hookups to these sites. The trackside area of the soon-to-be abandoned CNR line was suggested as a suitable in-town site, and the Utilities Committee was directed to investigate the costs of establishing a campground on that location, if the land can be leased from the CNR.

Council considered the proposed site of the Elk Point and District Agricultural Society Fairgrounds, north of Pan Canadian Petroleums, and agreed that this is a suitable site for this type of development. The Town would be prepared to amend the land use bylaw to provide for rezoning of the area at such time as an application is made by the Ag Society.

A problem with parking on private property by mural viewers was dealt with. Signs indicating that the area in question is private parking will be installed by the Town to alleviate the problem.

Two candidates for the post of temporary receptionist-typist for the Town Office will be interviewed, and the Town will advertise for a public works employee to fill a temporary vacancy which exists due to the illness of lead hand Hilbert Bintz, who has suffered a stroke and will be off work for some time.

Council approved the purchase of 200 yards of cold mix to be used for street repairs, and agreed to oil the lane west of Heritage Lodge as a dust control measure. If funds and time permit, a two block section of 49 St. will also be oiled.

Looking ahead to the festive season, Council agreed to purchase 11 Christmas street lights at the cost of $220 per unit, as had been approved in the 1989 budget.

An innovative approach will be taken to a long standing problem of poor water pressure on 50 Street north of 55 Avenue. The homeowners will be approached regarding the installation of pumps and pressure systems by the Town, which would bring their water pressure to a more adequate level. Purchase and installation of the equipment would cost the Town about $7200, a small fraction of the astronomical $75,000 price tag of installing new water lines to permanently correct the condition.

The cost of undertaking a study to determine and secure a new raw water supply which would be adequate and long term will determined by the Utilities Committee. The present problem with discolored water has been traced to the precipitation of manganese, which is at a high level due to the present water source. The problem is to be combated with the addition of potassium permanganate, and by pre-chlorination rather than post-chlorination. Aeration of the reservoir may also help the condition.

Bylaw 496 / 89, regarding a partial street closure, was given second and third readings following the receipt of ministerial approval. Council Procedural Bylaw 498 / 89 was also given its final two readings.

A suggested bylaw which would have required a cash deposit with each nomination for the general municipal election was defeated.

Council was told that only 10 building permits, valued at $138,550, have been issued in 1989, a severe drop from previous years and less than a fifth of those issued in 1983, which had the lowest building permits, at $707,000, in the past 11 years.

ted 'Mrs. Green Thumb' with the section award donated by Virginia's Hairport.

Two first-time winners were on the list, and received prizes from two first-time sponsors. Fresh Fruit convenor Lena Stepa presented a prize from Woody's Trophies and Gifts to section winner Helen Trach, while Photography convenor Lillian Demchuk, reporting an excellent turnout of 131 entries, presented the Dave's Pizza award to Debra Kilby.

Two new awards in the Baking section were presented for the first time this year. Dolores Harps-Brunner was the winner of the Ethnic Meal competition, receiving an award sponsored by Albi Electric, while Jane Mahon won the Heart Smart baking award sponsored by the Heart Foundation. Runners-up in the categories were Faye Sommerville and Donna Babcock, respectively.

Grains and Hay convenor John Bennett reported good quality but 'a big empty space' in his section, and thanked the new entrants for their part in this year's fair. He presented section winner Gordon Kuhn with his prize from John Wozniak Texaco

Bulk Service.

Arts, Crafts and Hobbies Section winner was Verona Lea Flanders, whose prize was sponsored by Elk Point Insurance and Realty. This was one section where entries were many, varied and excellent in quality.

Katharine Shymkiw was the Knitting, Crochet and Weaving winner, with her prize sponsored by the Toronto Dominion Bank. Ardis Dobson of Paradise Valley won the Sewing section award, sponsored by Capitol Drug, while Irene Magnusson was the winner of the Creative Writing section, sponsored by the Lakeland Review.

Junior Fair convenor Gabrielle Bayduza proudly announced that entries in her section were up considerably from 1988 levels, with 27 youngsters contributing. Jennifer Flanders was the first prize winner, while Nicole Sommerville and Colin Bjorkman tied for second place. Junior Fair prizes were donated by John and Gladys Drobot of Wagon Wheel Ranch and by the Hilltop Cafe.

The Senior Citizens' section also displayed an array of fine work, including a display by the residents of Heritage Lodge. Winner of the award, presented by Irene Magnusson in memory of her late husband Clifton, was Grace Barwick.

Special thanks went to the Elk Point Ukrainian Dance Club and the Elk Point 4-H Multi Club for their interesting and colorful displays, and to Imperial Lumber and Wolanuk's Fashions and Foods with their kind loan of necessary display materials, as well as to the various businesses who loaned items for display in the various sections.

Swathing underway

Swathing of canola and barley is underway in the Elk Point area, with hot, dry weather speeding up the ripening process. Some difficulty is being encountered where heavy rain and wind earlier this month has caused crops to lodge.

Very light hail was reported in the area on August 2 and August 10, with some damage resulting.

Soil moisture is dwindling rapidly and barley crops are showing signs of stress from the lack of moisture.

The T-Ball phenomenon

By Billie Milholland

How can you tell when someone is over forty? Ask them about T-ball. When my kids were six years old they played beach ball, kick-the-ball, roll-the-ball and maybe some catch-the-ball, but no one thought to organize them. Has this deprivation warped and stunted my children? I dared not speculate when news of this phenomenon reached me. But latent guilt did induce me to rush out and watch a game.

It was incredible entertainment. A whole ball field full of small people milled around the legs of taller people who waved their arms and shouted directions. Then the sea of little bobbing heads divided and some of them wandered out into the field and spread out randomly.

Some of the tall people rushed around pointing and pushing and dragging the small people to specific placements on the field. Other tall people herded small people behind a chicken wire fence. The game was about to begin.

A small person wearing a large helmet was handed a small bat and directed to stand in front of a piece of pipe jammed into the ground. Perched on top of the pipe sat a ball. Ah ha, the tee in t-ball. Golfers invented this game. The kid in the helmet frowned as he walked up to the ball and pipe. I could see that he knew he had to hit that ball, but he had the bat over the wrong shoulder. A big person rushed to the rescue. Strike one. His aim was a little off. Strike two. His aim was a little more off. He swung again, connected, and the ball flew beautifully down center field. He stood there, stunned. Big people yelled, "Run! Run!" Little people in the field stood and watched the ball go by. Big people yelled, "Run after it!"

After a little encouragement, the little guy made it to first base where he knocked over the first baseman who was tying his shoe. They had words. A small girl got hold of the ball and threw it to first where the first baseman and batter were having words. When they ignored her ball, she ran over to have words too. Big people sorted this all out so that the second batter could have a turn. This batter knew what she was doing. One mighty swing and the ball bounced past third base. "Run, run!" shouted the big people. The girl ran. The first baseman and the little guy on first base watched her coming. "Run, run!" shouted bigger people. The little guy on first didn't think they meant him. They did mean him. He protested. "This is my base, let her get her own." He was persuaded to take second base which he reluctantly left for third when the outfielders had a bit of a disagreement over the ball. The game was heating up. The next batter made it to first and the big people became very enthusiastic. The pressure was on the next batter, but he was unconcerned. He stopped to visit with the backcatcher and they had a good talk before some impatient big person intervened and positioned the batter before the ball. Strike one. And then, POW! a great hit. The whole field burst into action. Many small people ran after the ball. The batter raced to first and waited for the guy on first to put his helmet back on so he could run too. Big excitement as all bases raced for home plate. A big person rushed out to intercept as one player tried to pass another. "Why not?" he protested. "I can run faster."

Two runs coming in and the backcatcher got the ball. He held it up triumphantly. "Touch the plate! Touch the plate!" yelled many big people. The two runs came in. The catcher ambled over to the plate and ceremoniously touched it with the ball.

I enjoyed the whole game and I felt much better for seeing it. It is not my children who were deprived by not being included in organized sport at an early age. I can see that clearly. I have been deprived. All of those bigger people got great exercise, which is important when we're older. They were able to vent a lot of pent-up emotions, which is a good anti-stress thing to do. They are very smart inventing this game to keep themselves interested and in shape. And their children are to be commended for humoring them so nicely.

Hire-A-Student Closes

End of a decade

By Maureen Trefanenko
Student Placement Officer

The Elk Point Hire-A-Student office has closed its doors for yet another year.

This year, 173 full-time positions and 124 casual positions were filled by students registered with the St. Paul and Elk Point Hire-A-Student office.

Many thanks to all those who helped make the 1989 Hire-A-Student year such a success.

To the employers for having confidence in students. By hiring a student, you have given them valuable experience in the work force and have provided the necessary resources they need for furthering their education.

Thank you, Maurice Lafrance, for the use of your parking lot and water supply at Tags Food and Gas. The two car washes created employment for four young Elk Point students.

Thanks to Vicki Brooker of the Lakeland Review for her professional and positive coverage of the Hire-A-Student program.

Finally, a special thank you to Pat Vincent and the town staff for their assistance with the Elk Point office.

Remember, if you are an employer looking at hiring a student for the summer, keep in mind that there is government assistance available through the summer STEP and SEED programs. Deadline to apply for summer assistance is early into the new year. Call the Canada Employment Centre at 645-4428 for more information.

Watch for the re-opening of Hire-A-Student in May, 1990 and help make Hire-A-Student in the 90's as great of a success as the 80's.

Summer dig completed

Tours to the site and a proposed volunteer program of weekend digs did not work out as planned, but will be considered another year, she noted. She and her assistants were kept busy cataloguing around 80,000 pieces found at the site, many of which were beads and bones.

Both Forsman and Ms Belanger expressed thanks to the community and to their workers. Of the latter, Forsman said 'we haven't lost one person--I couldn't imagine a better field crew.' Many times, archaeological crews experience substantial personnel changes during a summer, he noted. In reply,

Melanie Boratynec spoke on behalf of the crew members, saying 'we had some pretty good bosses out there.'

The summer's dig is the first phase of a three-year, $1.4 million plan to develop the site into a tourist destination, with development of a visitors' centre, interpretive trails and access road over the next two years.

Eventual reconstruction of both Fort George and Buckingham House is still in the plans of the Historical Society and the Advisory Board. A project of this scope could cost in excess of $10 million, but would bring a huge annual influx of tourists, and tourist dollars, to the area and to northeast Alberta in general, and could well be the Lakeland's answer to southern Alberta's Head-Smashed-In Buffalo Jump and central Alberta's Tyrrell Museum.

OPPORTUNITY

Matt-N-Al Woodworking, Fort McMurray's largest custom kitchen cabinet maker, was on the verge of being closed in 1986. Wes Gedder, who had been working as foreman, had the opportunity to buy out his former employer.

CHALLENGE

With Fort McMurray's economy as it was, getting financing for the buyout through conventional sources was difficult.

SOLUTION

Gedder approached AOC with his idea and received financing for the buyout. AOC also provided him with consulting services to evaluate what the company was doing and to suggest improvements. Since then, the company has grown from a staff of four to ten and gross sales have increased from $540,000 in 1987 to $840,000 last year. Plans are underway to purchase computerized drafting equipment that will show customers three dimensional drawings of their new kitchens.

Alberta Trails - Part One

Another stone turned

By Irene Magnusson
Alberta Trails

How many trails would you drive down, if you had the chance? In Alberta, there are many trails, all interesting, all different, and I've managed to see a goodly number of them. But there are still many untravelled, many sights unseen, many stones unturned. Fortunately for me, I am not finished just yet.

There were hints and rumbles from the Fairview branch this spring, suggestions that another trip down the Athabasca River, and more explorations of the giant lake of the same name might be in the offing this summer, with the kind invitation to 'go along', and with fond memories of the wonderful three weeks there two years ago, I was leaning toward a "Yes" answer, and mentally trying to juggle my time and activities to fit.

As it turned out, a major overhaul to my son Mel's boat didn't come together in the time span required to fit in with his vacation, so Plan B came into effect. Again I was invited to participate. I threw myself into gear, and grabbed the night bus to Edmonton. An hour or so wait, then onto another bus, which (I guess) stopped briefly in Whitecourt.

Through the dark and steamy night, through God knows where, we arrived at Peace River in the dawn, another wait, then on to Fairview to be met by Mel at around 8 a.m., July 23, Mel's birthday.

We visited, shopped, saw other relatives in Fairview and spent, in all, a restful day. I looked at Mel's once-beautiful field of barley, wiped out and pounded into the ground by hail a few days before. Far too wet and soggy to work, he opted to enjoy his holiday from the gas plant job, and disc in the destroyed crop later. Their damaged garden, still badly battered, was already showing signs of some recovery.

All was ready by the following morning, and we left Fairview at 11 a.m., the van loaded with snacks, sleeping bags, cameras and film, maps and a large thermos of coffee; Mel's wife, Aline, knowing him for the coffee hound he is. The spotty hail had not damaged everywhere, and bright wildflowers lined the railway tracks as we left town, east toward Grimshaw. We paused briefly at Whitelaw Springs, to fill another large thermos with clear spring water from its bubbling font.

From Grimshaw we swung north, onto the McKenzie Highway, broad and smooth, stretching endlessly over the flat land. Briefly, we glimpsed the blue of Cardinal Lake, to the west. This is a land with no hills, and mostly we were passing fields of grain and hay, with groves of spruce and poplars, some farm buildings - and strangely, no fences. If there are livestock up there, they are highly invisible. Even passing over the small rivers, their shallow valleys made hardly a break in the flatness of the terrain.

My main impressions were of the miles of wide roadbed, the sides out to the trees or fields a flame of pink fireweeds, paced by tall power poles festooned with heavy wire between their wishbone bars. The colors couldn't have been lovelier if planned by man. Here and there the fireweeds were intermingled or gave way to blue asters, goldenrod, white yarrow, and much red clover. Deep pink Indian paintbrush appeared in thick patches, but, though I strained my eyes for miles, I didn't see the purple paintbrushes we saw before, on that other long-ago trip up this same road, on one of the last trips Clif and I made together.

Five years ago we had gone as far as Twin Lakes, and here we stopped this day, about 60 miles north of Manning, to enjoy a good lunch and visit with the owners of the lovely little cafe and stopping place on the highway.

On we sped, past or through the little towns of Keg River, Paddle Prairie, and the larger High Level, where we gassed up. One sign pointed to Rainbow Lake, where Mel and family had lived for two or three years, the other to Fort Vermilion, and beyond. But we were headed north, and north we went, crossing other rivers, all hurrying north now, arms of the Hay River.

We reached the "entrance" spot on our route, where we crossed over from Alberta into the Northwest Territories, the 60th parallel, marked by a 'welcome building', displaying artifacts of the north, clothing, tools, ect., and two girls armed with free coffee, countless maps and information leaflets, and a guest book for us to sign. That we had entered a violent thunder storm, with rain pelting down, didn't lessen the appreciation of the welcoming patio, bright with flowers and a large white polar bear on a painted blue concrete pond. I, because this was my first time over that border, was presented with a certificate, which states that I am now a member of the North of 60° Chapter, Order of Arctic Adventurers."

Soon on our way, we saw we had now run out of pavement, there had long been no sign of farming activity, and the roadsides were lined with aspen, spruce, birch, willows and tamarac, and with a more rolling nature. Drain ditches ran off toward the river we were skirting. About here, we saw the wolf at the roadside, tearing up a plastic bag of - what? - garbage? - which he didn't leave as we passed, but as we slowed for a picture, he disappeared into the woods. I had a very good view of him, and estimated he was a young one, very attractive and furry.

Our immediate destination being the first in a series of waterfalls, we reached Alexandria Falls about 7:30 p.m., which is wild and noisy, and gushes water the shade of maple syrup down over its rugged width. A safe viewpoint has been made, as the river walls are visibly insecure.

We looked, marveled and went on, down the churning Hay River, to Louise Falls, where the muskeg-brown water pours over square-cut blocks of layered rock, a truly breathtaking sight. Again, bright-painted, fenced view-points have been provided, with stepped paths to get you there. How many rolls of film will have been expended from that thrilling viewpoint, one can only wonder.

One more stop before we reached our destination for the night, was at Escarpment campsite. Here a gush of water floods from a gash in the high tan layered rocks, a longer drop than the first two, and smaller, but just as incredibly picturesque. On these tall escarpments, across the river, are the 'faces', seen by many, in the near-white limestone. huge piles of shattered rock show where slices of the cliff wall have separated and tumbled down to the river bank.

At each of these falls, there is a campsite, some quite elaborate, furnished with concrete picnic tables, firewood and pits, most with water and a covered shelter. The scenery roundabout is attractive, wild flowers of many kinds abundant, squirrels and ravens friendly, and well-built pathways to the scenic lookouts. Come with me to the next step into the magic North next week.

E.P.O.A. President's welcome

On behalf of the Elk Point Oilmen's Association, I wish to extend a warm welcome to all the golfers and visitors involved in our Sixth Annual Tournament.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the golfers and sponsors for helping to make our tournament a success. Your support is greatly appreciated.

As well, I would like to give some recognition to the committee for their tireless efforts in a thankless job. Without volunteers such as these we would be unable to organize the functions we all enjoy.

Good luck and good golfing!!!

Best wishes,
Mike Glover

Greetings from Mayor Bruce B. Kleeberger

It is my pleasure to extend a warm and cordial welcome on behalf of all citizens of Elk Point, to the golfers and sponsors of the Sixth Annual Oilmen's Golf Tournament.

This annual event had grown and improved with the staging of each passed and successful tournament. Though early in it's history, this tournament has become the favorite of many golfers. And, is already entrenched with tradition and notoriety.

By attracting participants from across north eastern Alberta, Elk Point can capitalize on the ideal opportunity to promote our vibrant community, it's varied and unique attractiveness and as importantly, it's citizenry.

Congratulations to the Elk Point Oilmen's Association for organizing what I am confident will be another outstanding and successful golf tournament.

I am also confident that our many visitors will be warmly received during their stay in our community.

Best wishes to one and all for a most enjoyable tournament.

Heinsburg Eagles represent Alberta

Heinsburg Eagles fastball team will represent Alberta in the Western Canadian Intermediate A Championships scheduled for September 1 to 4 in Lloydminster, with teams from Manitoba, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, the Yukon and the North West Territories also taking part. Their first game is scheduled for Friday, September 1 at 11:00 a.m.. Opening ceremonies will be held Friday evening.

The Eagles won the right to represent the province at a tournament in Sherwood Park earlier this month, which was attended by teams from all over the province, including teams from Calgary, Edmonton and Lethbridge. They started off with an 11-5 victory over Mundare, then won a close 2-1 decision over the host Sherwood Park team. Following their first loss of the tournament, to Lloydminster, the Eagles again faced Sherwood Park and beat them 8-1 in semi-final action. Heinsburg then took on Lloydminster in the final game and were defeated 5-3 to take second place. Because Lloydminster is hosting the championship tourney and will take part as the host team, the Eagles will be the Alberta representatives.

Troy Lorenson's excellent pitching and Darcy Youngmans' hot batting, with 15 hits out of 18 attempts, led the Eagles to their victory. Youngmans credited the entire team with the success, calling it a 'team effort--everyone played to their potential.'

The Eagles would like to thank all their fans for their encouragement and support throughout the season.

What's news at the library?

Recently, the elementary children participated in our crazy "Hat and Tie Day" and painted a mural. Silly stories and riddles were read and then the children were intrigued as "Tina, The Great" and "Daring Daphne" performed their amazing magic tricks. The children made envelope puppets and played two hilarious games: water balloon toss and dress-up relay. The spectators came to the conclusion that the girls are definitely the fastest dressers.

The pre-schoolers, on Friday, listened to stories, the fingerplay "Jack and Jill" and watched the puppet show, "The Fox Who Travelled". Then the children each made a vegetable sculpture. These cute and adorable men and women were made from zucchini with raisins, beans and marshmallows for face features.

Some children entered their work in the Elk Point Fair. We then played "Little Rabbit Foo Foo" and the children's all time favorite "Duck, Duck, Goose".

Parents and Kids! Don't forget this Friday, August 18, is our "Sleepy Storytime" and come dressed in your P.J.'s or bring your favorite teddy or pillow and come join in the fun. Unfortunately, our Summer Reading Program is coming to an end, so remember, bring in those Bookasaurus Posters for judging.

Our final party for the elementary program will be Tuesday, August 22nd, at 10:00 a.m. and Friday, August 25th, at 10:00 a.m. for the pre-schoolers.

Wednesday, August 2, Frank Pavlick, Canada's Sports Poet, visited Elk Point. This very versatile poet, author and piano man from Red Deer was very popular with all ages. He played the piano, sang songs, recited funny poems and generally included the audience of about fifty people in his performance. Frank Pavlick was invited to take part in the Summer Reading Program, "Be a Bookasaurus", by the Northeast Library Project.

Our Thursday afternoon matinee this week will be "Lady and the Tramp" at 2:00 p.m., August 17, 1989.

Some more videos ready for our patrons to take out are: National Geographic's series, "Egypt: Quest for Eternity" and "The Grizzlies".

Follow the buffalo

Word has just been received that Ruth Andrishak's radio drama, Follow the Buffalo Home, will be aired on CBC AM Radio at 3:00 p.m. this Sunday, August 20. The hour-long drama was broadcast previously on the CBC FM station.

We also have, "Victory Garden Recipes", "Eugene Levy Discovers Home Safety", and "Consumer Reports on Cars".

Marryin' Sam Officiates...

Rev. Sam Donaldson officiates at the outdoor wedding ceremony in the Happy Trails Wagon Train camp at Muriel Lake, as Kathy and Ken Foster renew their marriage vows before their family and friends.

Blessed Event...

The newborn daughter of Jenny and Randy Scott is christened by Rev. Sam Donaldson in a moving outdoor ceremony.

Handy With A Hammer...

Happy trails lead home

Five creaking covered wagons and almost fifty riders spent the past week on back roads and bush trails, reliving the ways of the old west on the Elk Point and District's Light Horse Club's Happy Trails wagon trek.

The journey got off to a fitting start on the Heritage Day weekend, with an old fashioned holiday gathering of games and contests for all ages at the two-century-old site of Buckingham House fur trading fort. Tuesday morning saw the wagons hit the trail north and eastward across the hills and valleys to the edge of the Frog Lake Indian Reserve, continuing northward and angling off to the west on Wednesday to reach the edge of Muriel Lake.

An influx of visitors joined the modern-day pioneers on Thursday for two very special celebrations. The first was the christening of Natasha, newborn baby daughter of Jenny and Randy Scott, Nicole, their older daughter, and Laura Scott, Randy's mother. Rev. Sam Donaldson of Elk Point United Church officiated at the outdoor ceremony.

Rev. Donaldson then donned a Stetson and mounted a horse to ride on to his next assignment of the day: a pioneer style wedding, at which Kathy and Ken Foster renewed their marriage vows of ten years ago. 'Marryin' Sam' was accompanied by the nervous bridegroom and best man Morris Irvine as they rode up to the outdoor chapel. After a false start with an unconventional and uncalled-for phony bride, the real bride was escorted down the grassy aisle by Roy Scott to the strains of the Wedding March, accompanied by her matron of honor, Fae Irvine, and the two Foster daughters, all in pioneer finery.

The happy couple departed on horseback for the shortest honeymoon in history, but were soon back for the feasting and presentation of home-made gifts which was always a part of a wedding in the old west.

Friday, the horses were again hitched and saddled and the trek continued, turning southwest to spend the night at the Willie Poiras homestead, and reaching their final destination in the Spring Park community on Saturday, where the successful completion of the trip was celebrated with a supper, dance and presentation of awards.

Bags of Fun...

Boys and girls competed in an old fashioned sack race during the Heritage Day celebration at the Wagon Train starting point.
